		Posting summaries of what was in lectures each day			Though we used CHEF at the start of the semester, it petered out toward the end. All homework assignments were on it in the beginning to none in the end. It seemed as though we used it as an afterthought.
	Use it more!	lots of things: schedules, revision, homework, keys	better notes	use it a lot!	its very functional, just needs more use could have used it more, the use wasn't consistant so we were constantly jumping back and forth btwn homework on CHEF and given in class	I would make sure the schedule on CHEF was specific and up-to-date (the thing that changes most throughout the semester), put all homework assignments on it, put handouts for class on it, then students could print them out themselves.		Check it often if you want it to be helpful use it more, post all assignments online, maybe even handouts for spacecadets like me don't learn as well that way, Im an auditory learner	used it more	give HW and keys through it, give lesson-specific links and EC options	I would only ask questions from it occasionally because it is so untraditional it was useless and an annoyance and CMS should never be used to replace announcements and handouts in class	use it all the time or not at all	I wouldn't	see above	It's a useless waste of time and about the only thing I used it for was to print off extra copies of the syllabus if I'd left mine behind, which wastes paper	I really didn't like CHEF, or find it helpful and I think explaining it took up too much time in class, considering the very little use it was put to. If you were going to use it at all, I would think you should do so regularly, cause we just stopped using it and forgot about it except when you mentioned it. had to depend on a computer for assignments when I live across 40		more links to info	I would not use it only part of the time	You can find the link to it on page 341 posted things more often	for homework postage and a class schedule and labs and tests		I would tell them the address	This was helpful for me because I am fairly disorganized and it was a good way for me to check in about class and work for the class

	Could have used it more than just on the rare occasion	assignments, resources, web for sure	drob box?	good luck	I really don't feel its necessary to evaluate CHEF, it was going to be such a cool part of our course, but we didn't really use it frustrating to use		post notes and assignments	as only source of assignments and important news	check CHEF all the time so you don't miss anything!	CHEF runs very slowly on my computer and I accidentally pushed "back" a lot which messes it up

Annoying to have to check online for homework and print it out instead of getting homework handed out					We only used CHEF to print off assignments which could have been handed out in class. Class Schedule/syallbus already handed out. If class news/updates would've been posted on CHEF, would have been annoying to have to check it every day, better to get news and assignments from teachers in class or through email. Maybe an email list for each class would have been easier
Didn't really	update resources, assignments, and announcements sections weekly	like an organizer		don't worry about it having to remember to get online to get assignments	more consistant/frequent use	post regular outlines of class lecture, outlines etc		remember to check it it was not convenient or enhancing to class discussion or material	more CHEF-based work rather than in class paper assignments	more CHEF-based material, use of all CHEF applications to moderate class activities	just not use it	that it is pointless because it is rarely used
It didn't detract, it was just annoying sometimes to have to go print out HW instead of getting it in class	have more resources posted there, not just the things needed for the assignments	for extra resources pertaining to the class	as simply a place to pick up homework	it is a good resource if your prof. actually uses it	CHEF is something that is only useful if the profs. put a lot of time into setting it up as a valuable resource

N	N	N	N	N	Y	N	N	N	More use of CHEF by instructors	more use w/ HW assignments (posting most of them on CHEF)	helped w/ links to sites that assisted certain HW Assignments

N	N	N	N	N	N	N	N	N	More resources/links on it	posting exercises on it to practice	it made some things easier like having websites to search all in one place and having homework available anytime (when it was posted that is)

since it was not frequently updated, it wasn't too useful	update/utilize more	put all HW assignments on, past exam grades in student drop boxes, labs (so protocols can be written before lab)	I wouldn't have student turn HW through the network	that it is useful to see schedules and links for HW	I think CHEF is a good program and should be used more heavily
It didn't	Post new announcements and keep it updated	make sure to post new announcements	don't know	it is fine as long as the professor keeps it updated	I think that CHEF is a good tool to be used in a class, but it doesn't fit every professor's style of teaching. So I think that only professors who are going to really utilize it should use it in a class it didn't detract either, but it seemed kind of pointless to have to print HW assignments off CHEF, when they could just as easily be handed out in class		I don't think I would use it	I wouldn't use it to post assignments	That an unfortunate component of the class is that it uses CHEF and some of the assignments are online it was used mainly for HW and handing those out in class would have been better	they didn't use it much, and it was sometimes confusing what they were going to post, and what they weren't	schedules, links, and copies of assignments handed out in class	I would use it as a resource, not as a requirement that people must use. Most things would be available on CHEF, but not the primary means of giving out info	check it often for updates they might not give you in class orient it more around assignments, less around class	to distribute assignments; give links to extra material; things outside class	I would not use it in class	that it can be a helpful program, depending on how teachers and students utilize it it didn't really detract, but it provided an interface other than lecture	I feel that we used it so infrequently, but every time we did I thought it was a fine experience	to post homework assignments and some lecture materials for visual learners. Also to have discussion or Q/A periods once a week or so	As a substitute for class discussion or a place to dump material not covered in class	that it was a helpful organizer	personally, I'm not wild about the incorporation of so much technology into the learning process, I think it is a capability that could easily be abused. CHEF, however, didn't contribute to these feelings and I think it is a useful service it didn't really	I thought it was a good experience, keep it updated	I would use it as a way to reach everyone at anytime. Have handouts/resources available for everyone to get copies	I don't know	I would say that it was a great tool for a course. Great organizer tool

I just didn't use it much except to get HW assignments	just make sure the class stays in the classroom and out of class workstations	to give the curriculum, the HW assignments, for a calendar, and for reminders. An online syllabus of sorts	I would have students do online worksheets	good luck, hope they don't make you do online HW or quizzes	Its great for announcements and assignments. Its like a class calendar w/ links to informative sites. But don't make it more than that CHEF is such a small part of the class that you will notice no significant difference from non-CHEF-using classes make it more user-friendly with fewer boxes and other utilities	probably have all HW posted on it and have some interactive HW		it's a good CMS that helps organize work and helps you find more resources	make some HW need to be done online having to figure the computer out		for assignments	for discussion on materials	take your time and get used to it beforehand

it meant if I remembered last minute we had a HW assignment, I'd have to find a computer w/ internet and a printer	made all the HW assignments available on CHEF. The routine would have made it easier to remember	either to assign work or if it were a discussion/response based class for students to respond to each other	I wouldn't use it for announcements or last-minute things unless the students were on it all the time	interesting	I didn't mind it, but because of our infrequent use of it, it didn't stay in my mind and I didn't get better at using it it was annoying and unnecessary, it was easier to be told the information that was posted there or have the assignments given to us in class. As for announcements, they were better and more conveniently received by email	nothing, it wasn't their fault that it was more of a hassle than a help	maybe the same as they did: post announcements/HW, but if I had a choice I wouldn't use it post answer keys on CHEF	put all assignments on CHEF		its ok
The contact with computers rather than people can always be distracting.	Get everyone at the same level in relationship to knowledge with using computers	Mark did a fine job of having a few sessions in the computer lab until we felt comfortable with it.	I didn't like the discussion part so much, I think discussion should not be over computers.	Learn how to use it because it may be in another class in the future!
